Death of a Modern Nero.

A late mail from the West Coast of Africa brings tidings of the death of Gezo. the notorious slave King of Dahomey. who, for upwards of twenty five years, supplied the demands of the Spanish, Pertugese and American slave dealers who infest the Bight of Benin, ravaging and devastating the interior far and wide, by his slave hunts, to obtain victims for his Eurepeats customers.

Livingston, Barth, Bowen and other reliable travelors bear witness to the immense number of flourishing towns laid waste by the slave trade, and to the comparative happiness of the interior, where the slave trade does not exist. There are the sites of eighteen sacked cities within the distance of sixty miles between Badagry and Abceokuta. At the taking of one of these, Gezo killed or captured terenty thousand people. The whole number destroyed in this section of country, within the last fifty years, can not be less than Half a Million of souls!
